

Book Portfolios

One way to keep track of and encourage independent reading, is to help children create portfolios for the books they read. Print this page to have students fill out each time they complete a book. They can enjoy watching their portfolio of completed books grow and also look back on past pages to remember how they liked previous reads.

This can also help you to keep track of what each student is reading at any given time. When they start a new book, have them fill out the top half, then clip it to the board. You can put names on each clip, so you can see if anyone's is missing to check in with them and make sure they have a book at all times.
