Two Does on a Hike

My friend and I went for a hike on a path.

“Look!” she cried. “I see a doe between the pine trees.”

“What is a doe?” I asked.

“It is a female deer,” she explained.

“Does the doe have any babies?” I asked.

“Yes, and—wait! I see two does.”

“Nice! Two mommies with their babies. How sweet!” I cried.

“I bet the babies are friends,” she guessed.

“Yes, they do not seem to be foes.”

“Let’s tidy up this path,” my friend said. “Then the deer will not stub their toes on the hoe my dad uses for planting.”

“Yes,” I agreed. “We do not wish to bring the deer any woes.”
